

A quiet gym tracker — private, and entirely on your phone.

Niten keeps workout tracking simple. Log your sets, watch your strength climb, and keep an eye on the balance of your training — with no account, no cloud, and nothing uploaded anywhere.

Get it on your phone

1. Open this link in your phone's browser:

<https://nitenfitness.app>

2. Tap Share, then Add to Home Screen, so it opens like an app.
3. That's it — start logging. It works offline, too.

What you can do

Log your lifts. Enter weight and reps; Niten shows your estimated one-rep max and charts it over weeks, months or years — real strength trend even as your reps vary.

Organise your workouts. Group exercises into sessions (say Push / Pull), and the app colours each so you can see at a glance which one is due.

See the whole picture. A muscle-balance map, training volume, and warm little milestones as the sessions add up.

Time your work. Built-in interval and Tabata timers, plus a hold timer for planks and dead hangs.

Track the body, not just the bar. Optional weight, waist, resting heart rate and more, with a healthy-range nudge.

Yours, and private

Everything you log stays on your device — no sign-up, no tracking. Back up to a file or a note whenever you like, and restore just as easily. Nothing leaves your phone unless you send it.

Support

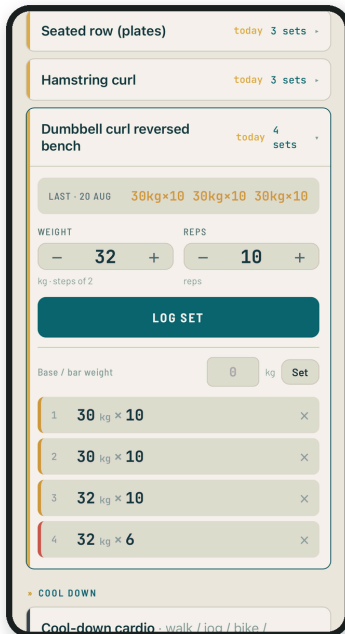

Niten is free, and always will be. If it helps your training, a coffee keeps it going — and questions or ideas are always welcome at Niten.fitness@gmail.com.

A few glimpses of the app in use.

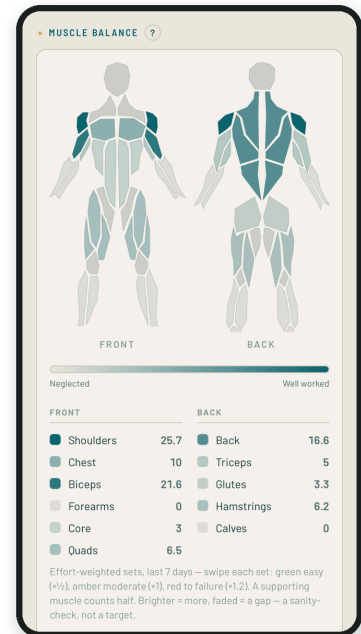

Log a set.

Last time's sets are right there; every set is tinted by how hard it was.

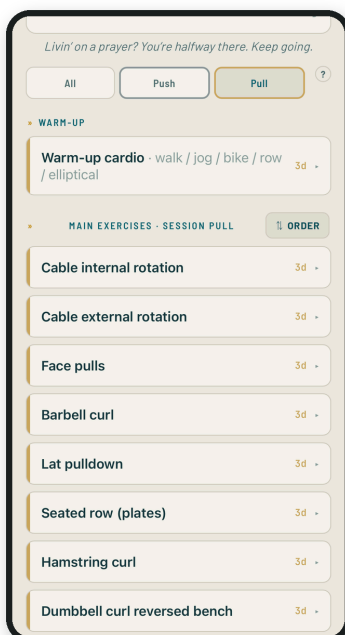

See strength climb.

Estimated one-rep max, charted over weeks, months or years.

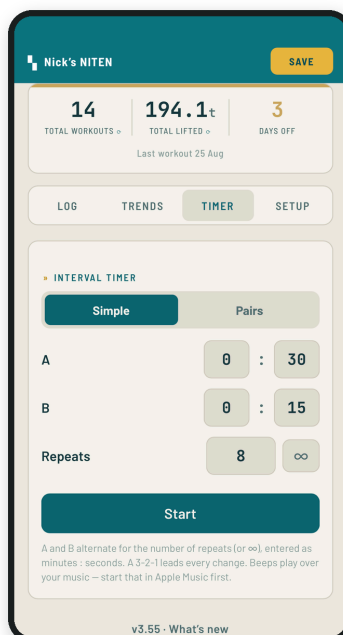

Spot the gaps.

A muscle-balance map from recent sets — a sanity check, not a target.

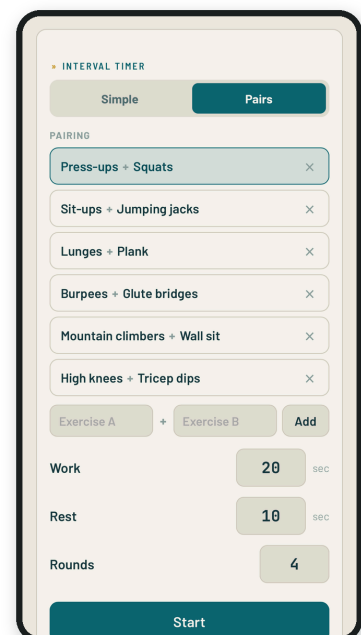

Train by session.

Push / Pull or your own labels, coloured by how long since you trained each.

Interval timer.

Work, rest and rounds, with beeps over your music.

Tabata pairs.

Alternate two moves for a conditioning finish.

The full picture — everything Niten does, grouped at a glance.

Logging

Weight and reps for any lift • estimated one-rep max, charted • rate each set's effort — easy, steady or to failure — in colour • last time's sets shown when you open an exercise • bodyweight and assisted moves • timed holds • per-exercise units, step size and bar weight.

Exercises

Sixty-plus built in, grouped by equipment (bodyweight, dumbbells, kettlebells, barbell, cables, machines) • add your own weight or cardio moves • tag their muscle groups • switch any on or off • drag into your own order.

Sessions

Split training into sessions — Push / Pull, A / B or your own labels • each filter coloured by how long since you last did it, so what's due stands out • log a workout for any date.

Progress & trends

One-rep-max trends per exercise • daily training volume • a muscle-balance map from recent sets • a weekly summary you can email or copy • new bests and body changes flagged • running totals you tap through by period • warm milestones as the sessions add up.

Timers

Interval timer (work / rest, set your rounds) • Tabata pairs to alternate two moves • a hold timer with a count-in for planks and dead hangs • log a finished session as conditioning, with its own trend figure and milestones.

Body metrics

Weight, waist, resting heart rate, VO₂ max, body fat, grip strength and blood pressure • each charted with a since-start change • plus a waist-to-height health guide.

Private & yours

Simple mode to begin, Advanced when you want the lot • a choice of colour themes • everything stays on your device — no account, no cloud, works offline • back up and restore any time, to a file or a note • a gentle nudge every ten workouts.
